

Paying attention to the tiny details when typesetting sets you apart as a typesetter. Here are some things to look out for:

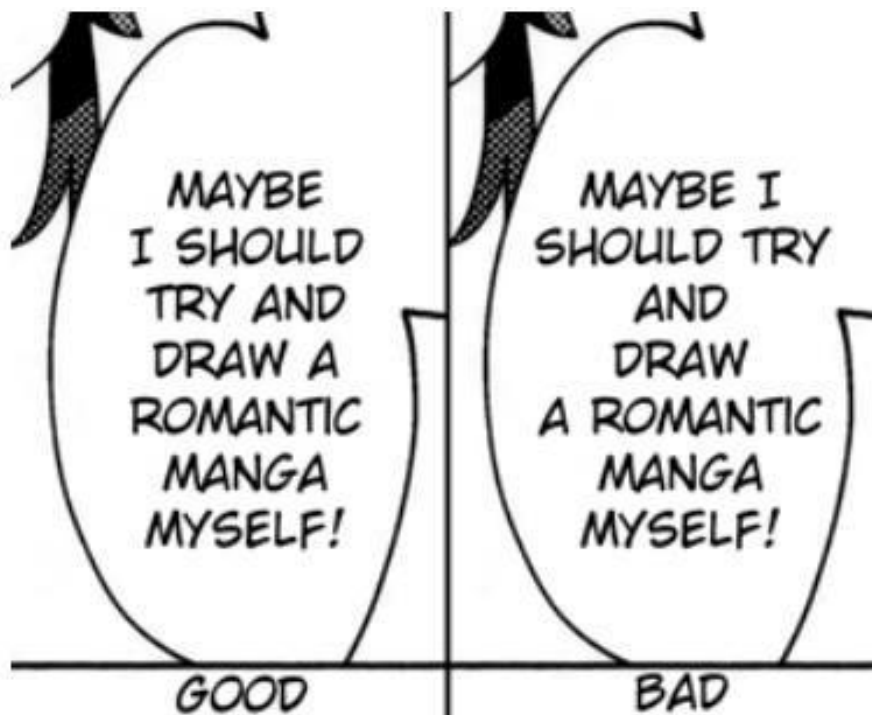

Font Size

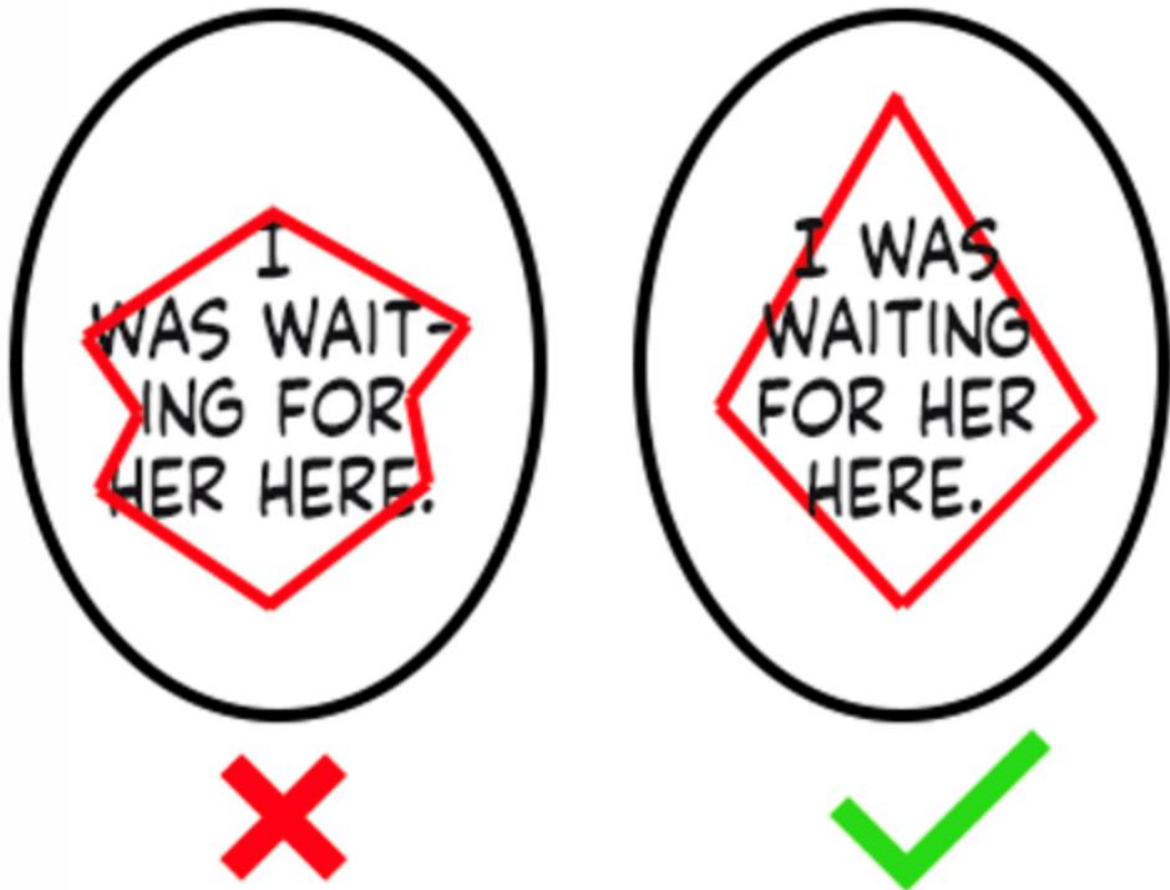

Don't overcrowd the bubble and leave your text room to breathe, but also don't make font sizes too small so as it's difficult to read on smaller screens.

Shaping

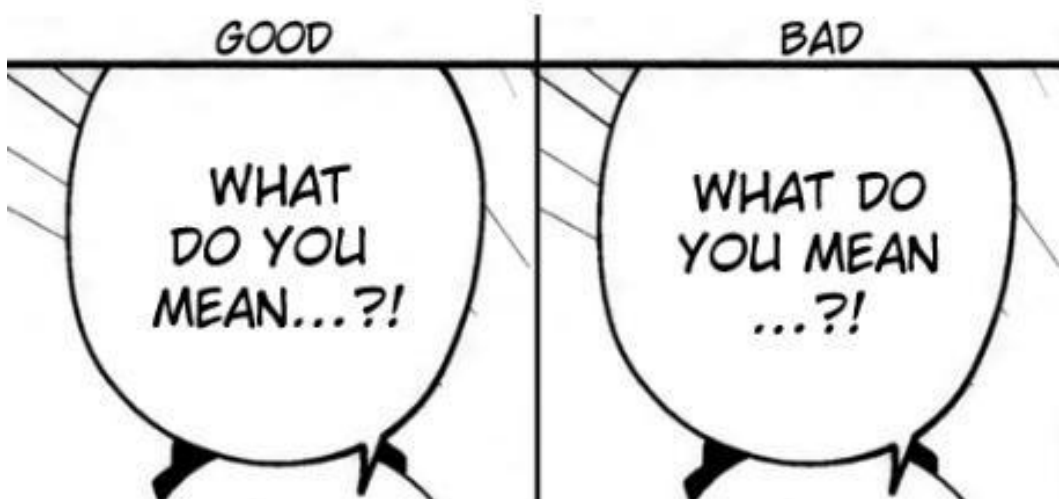

Try to make the text follow the bubble contour. Use hyphens if needed.

Punctuation

Punctuation should be placed on same line, not onto the next.

- !? when written in English should be ?!, Kageyama!? →

Kageyama?!

- “...” should fall at the end of a phrase, not in the beginning., ...I don't understand → I don't understand...

- All speech bubbles/narration should have punctuation in the end even if they're separated.,

What do you // mean? → What do you... // mean? Okay → Okay.
